WASHINGTON, JULY 11, 1887.

The Archdiocese of New York has finally made announcement to the "reverend clergy and faithful laity" of his diocese that Dr. Edward McGlynn, late rector of St. Stephen's Church, for curiously ignoring a positive command of the Pope, is cut off from the communion of the Church, from its sacraments and participation in its prayers, and that should he persist in his present obdurate course he will be deprived of the right to Christian burial after death. The Pontiff at Rome, consistently with the attitude he has taken, and the instructions he has issued relative to Dr. McGlynn's offenses, could do nothing less than close the portals of the Church upon him.
To have done otherwise would have been construed by the friends of Dr.
McGlynn as a surrender on the part of the Papal authorities, and could not fail to encourage a further spirit of insubordination. It is now thought that the recalcitrant priest will make an appeal to the Archdiocese for a regular ecclesiastical trial, on the ground that the proceedings at Rome are irregular and invalid. But a diocesan court will scarcely assume the right to call the Pope's authority into question. If appeal is taken it will, doubtless, be to Rome whence the bull of excommunication issued.

KING KALAKAUKA of the Hawaiian Islands has been practically relieved from duty. That is, he retains his rank and is still monarch of all he surveys, but is not permitted to survey much. With a new Ministry, about the formation of which he was kindly permitted not to worry himself, and which will kindly take upon itself the sole administration of public affairs, the King will have little else to do but draw his salary and spend it. It may be that Mr. Gibson, the deposed Prime Minister, will seek to incite resistance to the new order of things, but his opportunities are limited; he is under cures without resources, and apparently without adherents. The new Ministry, on the other hand, has powerful support in the Spreckles firm, and its action, if reasonable and sagacious, will be supported by the foreign powers interested in the Islands. In the meantime, Queen Kalakaua returns in a depressed and dispirited condition, so far as her financial expectations were concerned, and with little consolation for her capricious husband.

MR. JEFFERSON DAVIS is out with another elaborate chapter of war romances, the chief burden of which is that on several occasions during the late unsuccesses efforts were made to assassinate him. Very likely there is some foundation for his beliefs. The times were considerably out of joint in those days, and there were people even in Richmond to whom Mr. Davis was obnoxious. Cranks and conspirators of all sorts were bred with unshakable rapidity. But any attempt to implicate Governor Colquitt of Pennsylvania in a conspiracy to take the life of the Confederate President must fall of its own preposterous stupidity. Governor Curtis wasn't built that way. Mr. Davis should call a halt upon his garrulity before running into such temperamental imaginations. He no doubt passed through many dangers, but he seems to have been far more fortunate than President Lincoln in his escapes.

HAROLD E. ANDERSON of Santa Barbara, known as California's olive king, has eighty acres of bearing olive trees, and expects to make 25,000 bushels of oil from his present crop. He is also doing well with English walnuts and almonds.

HAROLD E. ANDERSON, the American Minister to Denmark, speaks much of his time in the Library of Congress, especially in regard to the work of the Senate, and of his services to the country. He is spending the winter in Copenhagen.
